Introduction

In our swift changing world, when boundaries are loosing among countries people travel, it is essential to own information the traditions and languages of the places you visit. The object of these scientific research is English and Uzbek national rituals. The traditions, customs, expectations and social and legitimate rules people follow are donated by culture. Every nations and countries possess their own specificities of spiritual and cultural life, history and conventions. The writer of article Yusupova Naima[1] said that spiritual and cultural life traditions, history and nations' life style and even flattering are expressed. The article aimed at how we can educate and compare young generation about values of traditions in both English and Uzbek countries. English is chosen and used observation and literature analysis methods the because the language is becoming popular in learning in my country which can assist to attract adults attention, traveling European countries without any fears and give full datas to them.

Tradition 1 "Tea drinking".

English residents have a drinking tea rituals who drink tea six times all days.

1th and 2nd cup of teas are for the morning: before breakfast and during breakfast.

3rd and 4th teas are for lunchtime and afternoon snacks.

A cup of tea should drink between 19:00 and 20:00 and before bed time which are 5th and 6th teas.

Tea is controlled as strict tea etiquette which is served with milk and sometimes with sugar. "British prefer silver tea sets in the house, even with small income, symbolizes well-being, goodwill in family [2].

Uzbekistan owes tea drinking ceremony, however, it has changed magnificently, also tea ceremony is revealed in there. Tea was brewed in a somovar and drunk it with jam and sugar. Despite the similarity of these drinking ceremony, they carry different meaning.

Tradition 2 "Country and poises"

As everyone knows, habits of England are so polite in everywhere who can control their emotions during speech. They don't talk loudly in the community places and shake their hands when meeting each other. Unlike English, Uzbek people are not so polite, but more emotional and good natured. Loudly speech is common for them.

Tradition 3 "Family values".

Family is highly valued in Uzbek culture. Men are typically being primary breadwinners and women taking on domestic responsibilities. In English culture the typical family unit is smaller than Uzbekistan and women are more likely to work outside the home, sharing with their house works with their parents. "Tolerance for Uzbekistan is the value inherited from ancestors. It is our common duty to protect and preserve this priceless legacy. Uzbeks are ancient nation that always shares bread it and says: "Welcome!". All of us, living in a diversified country, have the same rights and duties. All of us, regardless of our nationality, live in Uzbekistan in peace and harmony" [3].

"Koreans arrived to Uzbekistan more than 80 years. Around 200 thousand Koreans live in this country. They consider it a homeland. Some of my closest friends are Uzbeks. They wouldn't start an evening meal without Korean salad "kim-chi". In our family, cooking palov once a week has become a tradition. And this is for no reason. We love Uzbek bread and milk. We, Koreans, live in peace and understanding with all compatriots [4].

Tradition 4 "Wedding days ceremony".

Marriage is beginning of new family relations. In addition to the facts, wedding ceremony is celebrated in different ways in various nations of the world. Definitely Uzbek and English wedding ceremonies have also differences and similarities. The wedding traditions begin with choice of bride in Uzbekistan, then "seeing girl"

"breaking bread " these mean that betrothal happens. But in English it has another various positions, for example if young people fall in love each other, they run away from their parents and start new family and marrying secretly. All of them appearances of different countries.

Tradition 5 "Expressing flattering"

As everyone knows usage of phrasal words are often related to cultural life, history and other properties. From the article, flattering means that compliment and I can say that in order to express flattering Uzbek and English humans use simple words (honey, sugar, asalim) and collections (cupcake, oromijon). All compound words have one root which express fondness. There are some similarity of English and Uzbek languages, I meant that, shortening human names, for example, Robert is Doll, Dolly; Edward is Eddie; Baaxtiyor is Baxti. The differences in English language each part of compound words are made by suffixes which explain fondness, however, the suffix are add to last word in Uzbek

Tradition 6 " Love for gardening"

In Uzbekistan, people follow planting trees and flowers in order to harvesting or earning money, not for decoration. Because of the climate, the earth can not be worked all around the year, but only 5-6 months. The England resident are different. As a rule they create green places, main reason for gardening is decorating and create "wildness" by human hand. From my observation I can say that the humans thank to nature for being in balance weather all 12 month which is so beneficial for " green life".

As result of my observation, in Uzbekistan and in England, there are folk traditions that are similar at first glance, however, mean a completely different meaning (gardening and drinking tea). Both countries possess different traditions such as wedding days and family values.

Because of geographical locations and climate, traditions may owe similarities, They educate us with cultural way and say something from history, although traditions are various their bringings are similar.

Come to conclusion, people should admire and respect every countries' national traditions and also their owns because they have our history, present and future. They are so valuable, although distance of their meanings are far from each other.
